

Paul Langmack

Paul Langmack is an Australian former rugby league coach and representative and premiership-winning player.

While attending Fairfield Patrician Brothers, Langmack played for the Australian Schoolboys team in 1982.

Langmack won three premierships as a member of the Canterbury Bulldogs in 1984, 1985 and 1988, and later played for the Western Suburbs Magpies. In 1987, he became the youngest player in history to register 100 top-grade games at the age of 22 years 26 days. Langmack was named Rugby League Week's player of the year in 1992. In 1999 former teammate Phil Gould brought Langmack to the Sydney City club, he played one final season.

In 2002 he was a contender to replace Terry Lamb as the coach of the Wests Tigers and was reportedly the preferred candidate of senior players, including Terry Hill and Darren Senter. After the signing of Tim Sheens to the position, Langmack became assistant coach to Craig Coleman at the South Sydney Rabbitohs.

After Coleman was dramatically sacked immediately prior to the 2003 season, Langmack was installed as coach, but was unable to avoid the wooden spoon, winning just three games.

www.thefactor.com

NRL

Represented and captained Australian Schoolboys from Fairfield Patrician Brothers in 1982.

Member of 1986 Australian Kangaroo "Invincibles" Tour of England and France.

Played in winning Grand Final teams for Canterbury in 1984, 1985 and 1988 and in a losing Canterbury Grand Final team in 1986.

Captained Western Suburbs in 1991, 92 and 96 semi final series.

Played 315 first grade matches in Australia.

From 1991-98, captained Western Suburbs.

Dally M Captain of the Year 1995

Rugby League Week Player of the Year 1992